A blessing of these years I want to share is the support and graces I have received from my family and the School Sisters of Notre Dame.

Many students and colleagues have helped me become a better teacher and have each touched my life and blessed me – each in their own way.

The various opportunities I have had in my ministry – from teaching high school students through college and university students to teaching students gifted in science and math to physics research, grant writing and publishing – have been a blessing.

The wisdom I would like to share is God will not ask more of you than He knows you can handle. Those and what we honor – what we respect, esteem and revere – demonstrates what we revere – what we value. God loves you as you are, but that doesn't mean He doesn't want you to grow. There are no problems – just opportunities. Those to whom much is given, much is expected.
